Lunar New Year

The Chinese Calendar is a lunar calendar, said to be the longest chronological record in history, dating from 2600 BC. Like the Western calendar, the Chinese Lunar Calendar is yearly, with the start of the lunar year being based on the cycles of the moon.

The New Year Festival is a dating cycle that is based on the track record of the new moon. Therefore, as the track of the moon varies from year to year, the beginning of the year falls anywhere between late January and the middle of February on the Western (or Gregorian) Calendar.

The Chinese Calendar runs on a 60-year cycle and is made up of five 12 year cycles, with each of the 12 years named after an animal.

Both the Western (Gregorian) and traditional lunar calendars are used publicly in China and in North and South Korea, and two New Year's celebrations are held. In Taiwan, in overseas Chinese communities, and in Vietnam, the lunar calendar is used only to set the dates for traditional festivals, with the Gregorian system in general use.

The Legend

According to Chinese legend, the twelve animals quarrelled one day as to who was to head the cycle of years. The gods were asked to decide and they held a contest: whoever was to reach the opposite bank of the river would be first, and the rest of the animals would receive their years according to their finish.

All the twelve animals gathered at the river bank and jumped in. Unknown to the ox, the rat had jumped upon his back. As the ox was about to jump ashore, the rat jumped off the ox's back, and won the race. The pig, who was very lazy, ended up last. That is why the rat is the first year of the animal cycle, the ox second, and the pig last.

The rotating cycle of twelve animal signs was a folk method for naming the years in traditional China.

Characteristics

Horse: Popular, cheerful, hot-blooded and passionate.

Goat: Artistic, shy, passionate yet gentle.

Monkey: Erratic genius! Clever, flexible and original.

Rooster: Capable, outspoken, brave and talented.

Dog: Loyal, honest, make good leaders.

Pig: Chivalrous and gallant. Great thirst for knowledge.

Rat: Charming, attractive, hard-working perfectionists.

Ox: Patient, eccentric, eloquent and easy-going.

Tiger: Sensitive, thoughtful, courageous, short-tempered.

Rabbit: Talented, ambitious, conservative and reserved.

Dragon: Healthy, energetic, honest and stubborn.

Snake: Deep thinkers, wise, can be vain.

The Year of the Goat (Sheep)

The Goat or Sheep, the eighth sign in the Chinese Zodiac, symbolises creativity, intelligence, dependability and calmness. Goats enjoy being part of a group but prefer to stay on the sidelines. Content passing time alone to ponder, Goats often express themselves through artistic means.

Their good health is said to be linked with their calm personality. While they may appear fragile, they are usually very healthy, particularly when they are happy. However, Goats become sick when they are unhappy, especially if their sadness is related to romance. Goats are very private and often only have a few close friends.

Power and status are not important to Goats, and they enjoy working in teams. The best career choices for Goats are: florist, interior designer, day care teacher, actor, editor, hair stylist, illustrator, musician, artist or art history teacher.

Rabbits and Pigs are Goats' best companions, and their least compatible signs are Rats and Oxen.

Under the Chinese Zodiac, you are a Goat (or Sheep) if you were born in 1931, 1943, 1955, 1967, 1979, 1991, 2003 and 2015.
